INTO EACH LIFE SOME RAIN MUST FALL—By Kessler

Looks Like Al Again

GOV. SMITH has intimated that he will run again if his party drafts him.

If he does, he is almost as certain of election as anything human can be.

He is in higher favor than ever with the voters of this state.

He has given efficiency, decency and economy of administration.

He is definitely and openly liberal in his stand on prohibition. His party is a unit behind him.

His opponents are partly liberal (as evidenced by Senator Wadsworth's recent stand) and partly ultra-conservative. There is more than a likelihood that they will divide into two factions over the liquor enforcement issue, with two sets of candidates.

All this makes more than doubly certain the re-election of a great governor.

For that the voters can congratulate themselves.

And they do!

Murder "Evidence"

TWO PERFECTLY honest people "saw" a man pushed off the Manhattan Bridge Tuesday night.

They were in an automobile that was within a few feet of where this startling event was staged.

They had a couple of men arrested.

Yet the whole matter seems to be a misunderstanding.

The man was not pushed off the bridge, but out of a taxicab. Instead of falling into the water, he ran to the shore in the shadows.

This little episode is interesting because it shows how easily even honest eyes are mistaken by what they "see" at night.

This is a good thing to remember in considering the evidence that is being brought out at the investigation into the four-year-old murder case in New Jersey.

40 Errors, or 1

EARL CARROLL, in his plea to have set aside his year's sentence to the Atlanta Penitentiary, says that the judge committed forty errors in the conduct of his perjury trial.

If Carroll had not committed the ONE tactical error of holding the bathtub party there would be no need for him to engage eminent counsel to look for forty technical errors by a court.

For a Worthy Cause

JEWISH writers, actors and cantors and ministers are to hold a big entertainment for the benefit of superannuated members of their professions.

This is a charitable undertaking that should be supported by all who have the welfare at heart of men who have given their lives to great service.

The event will be held Saturday evening at Coney Island Stadium. A notable program will doubly repay those who attend for the worthy purpose of assisting a good cause.

Great Thoughts of Great Men

A rose to the living is more
Than sumptuous wreaths to the dead.—Waterman.

All things change, creeds and philosophies and outward systems—but God remains.—Ward.

God gives us strength to endure a great deal if we only strive ourselves to endure.—Anderson.

Who Does Your Thinking?

Whom do you permit to think for you?

Do you do your own thinking?

Do you use your own brain, or is it allowed to rust while some one else thinks for you?

Every one should think for himself.

Every man and woman should use his or her own brain.

It may be set down as axiomatic that if you permit another to think for you he will think to his own advantage.

You cannot afford to accept the thinking of another on faith.

He is no more infallible than you. He is just as likely to make a mistake as you are.

He is no more unselfish than you, and will be swayed as much by self-interest as you.

There are magazines and newspapers that attempt to guard their readers against opinions that differ from those of the editor.

They attempt to prevent anything which they think too radical or too advanced from reaching their readers.

They exercise a sort of protectorate over their readers.

They try to do the thinking for their readers. They think their readers are not capable of thinking for themselves.

Every man or woman who is interested in any subject should know all sides of that subject. He or she should acquire a knowledge of the facts and arguments on all sides.

It has been truly stated that he who only knows one side of a question does not know that well.

Therefore it is desirable to know all sides.

Knowing all sides, you may then think for yourself. You can reach your own decisions.

Most of the great questions in medicine, religion, politics, sociology, etc., are controversial. There are many sides to them. They have not been definitely settled.

Until they are definitely settled it behooves every man and woman to inform himself or herself of all sides and be guided by his or her own judgment.

Two and two are four. That is not a controversial question. It is settled for all time.

The earth is round and not flat. This is no longer controversial. It is settled for all time, unless the earth should change its shape.

The answer to Job's question: "If a man die shall he live again?" is still controversial.

Whether or not vaccination protects against smallpox is still controversial.

Whether the government should own and operate the coal mines or private capital should be allowed to continue to operate them is still controversial.

No man can be a walking encyclopedia or a university on wheels.

He cannot hope to acquire a knowledge of all things in heaven and earth.

But every man and woman should have a knowledge of the important things of life—those that bear immediately upon our social, moral, mental and physical welfare—and should do his own thinking in these matters.

It does not matter who you are nor where you are, you have time to acquire knowledge of these things.

Impartially learn all sides and then, after you have acquired all the facts, set about to think the matter out for yourself.

Let no man or group of men, let no organization or group of organizations, let no publication or group of publications, "protect" you.

You are able to take care of yourself.

You can take care of yourself better than the other fellow can.

Bear in mind always that when the other fellow "protects" you and "guards" your mind against the "contamination" of variant ideas and facts, he is working in his own interest.

Your mind is as good as his. Use it.

Think for yourself.

Samuel Macfadden
